Indian Rupee:

The rupee may remain under pressure

- The September USD/INR candle is likely to close on a bullish note, indicating continued pressure on the Indian rupee.
- A sustained move above the previous highs around 96.00 could strengthen the upward momentum, with USD/INR potentially moving towards 96.70 and 97.00.

- The overall trend remains bullish, supported by the strong September candle. The outlook would turn bearish only if USD/INR sustains below 94.20, which currently appears less likely.
- In the near term, 96.70–97.00 remains the key upside zone, while 94.20 is the major downside level to watch.
